

London 2012 Sustainable Construction Opportunities

“London 2012 & Public Sector Opportunities”

Sustainability in construction is not just a buzz word. Companies with proven green credentials are winning contracts with London 2012, local authorities and public bodies. By putting your business on the front foot toward a low carbon future you can open up new markets.

With just over £7 billion pounds being spent on building the venues for the Olympics and £4.5 billion spent by local authorities in the South East within construction and other sectors, it is important now more than ever that you need to make sure your business is fit to supply if you wish to win one of these contracts. Attend our FREE workshop to find out how you could have a slice of this pie.

What you will learn

- How to meet contract and buyer mandatory requirements
- Why sustainability is important to the construction industry
- Ways to increase your chances of winning a 2012 or local authority contract
- How to access new markets
