

Achieving Sustainability Standards in Construction

Tuesday 10th July, Oxford, Oxfordshire

Wednesday 11th July, Guildford, Surrey

Thursday 12th July, Ashford, Kent

9.30am – 12.30pm followed by networking buffet lunch

The sustainable design and construction agenda is expanding rapidly with ever increasing pressures being placed on construction and built environment businesses to comply with new policies and meet new standards.

You need to know how to make these work for your business. Not only will these FREE events help you to understand new and emerging government policies and standards, they will also show you how sustainable construction gives you a competitive edge.

- Code for Sustainable Homes – technical issues
- Sustainability checklist
- Sustainable procurement
- 2016 Zero Carbon Agenda
- Implications and challenges
- Training and support needs

Who should attend?

- Clients
- Developers
- Designers
- Contractors

Sustainable construction – saves money and helps secure future work

The South East Centre for the Built Environment (SECBE) works with construction companies and suppliers to help them improve their individual and collective performance.

Your voice, your choice – influencing policy and strategy, locally, regionally & nationally

SECBE is a consortium of business leaders that is encouraged and supported by the South East England Development Agency specifically to drive improvements through the Construction and Built Environment sector. Our unique position, sitting between government and business, enables us to influence the policy-making process and to help companies understand opportunities and challenges for the future.

Membership of SECBE is free – register on our website today to ensure your business is an industry leader.
